HONGKOND. NOVEMBER STR. 1883.

THE question of the strength of China's army possesses at the present moment exceptional interest. The Times, in a recent number, had a long article on the subject' giving a great mass of information, much of which must be European Police Force of this colony. regarded as unreliable. Li Hung-chang's army, for instance, is put down at 70,000 without reservation of any kind, whereas a correspondent of one of the Shanghai papers recently stated it as 40,000. The correspondent of the Shanghai paper is at least quite as likely to be accurately informed as the writer of the article in the Times. Mere figures, however, go for very little in this particular casp. We know that China could crucial point is one of quality more than quantity. The Times' article opens as follows:-"In visw of the existing relations 1.000 military reinforcements for Tonquin, ar- crease the commercial importance of the islandto consider what progress the Chinese Army has made in military efficiency during the 24 which would coal at Colombo and pass on to session. The re- this movement the Chinese, as well as members supposed weaker side is known to be for war the less inclined will the other feel to appeal to arms. The subject has engaged fitful attention on many occasions since Sir Tromas WADE wrote 32 years ago, at a period halfway between the two foreign wars, his description of the army of the Chinese Empire; and in some matters that account has been neither put out of dute, nor improved upon. But, although the internal economy and the distribution of the various forces composing the army have altered but little in the interval, the progress in the discipline and armament of the troops has effected a smotion the formation of the new corp. remarkable reform in the Chinese Army, as the facts we have to record will make sufficiently plain. But it must also be remembered that, although much has been accomplished, the revolution is still in course of development, and that the Chinese Army of the future will, even at the present rate of progress, be by the end of this century as much more efficient than the existing force as that is superior to the one described by Sir Thomas Wane in 1851." Assuming that when was the wife of the cook of the establish. causing his death. It seems that the deceased the progress has been, and will continue to be, as great as here indicated, that fact alone stands for very little in considering China's strength in relation to that of other powers, for the progress made by European nations in the science of warfare has during the last. quarter of a century been enormous. TIFLIS AND THE ARMENIANS.

A correspondent of the Globe, writing under date of Tiflis, September 8th, says:-Tiflis is On London.under a cloud just now. Acoustomed for nearly 20 years to the presence of the Czar's brother as Vicercy of the Caucasus, it fluds in his bureau: cratic accessor nothing to recompense it for the loss of the miniature court which the Grand Dake Michael hold on the banks of the Kura, and sighs for another scion of the Romanoff house to ON PARIS. restore the departed glories of the Viceregal residence. General Dondukoff-Korsakoff is a very able man, and as Russian officials go, an honest functionary; but the administrative vigour he displayed during his tenure of office in Bulgaria, and which excited so much hostility in Europe at the time, seems to have subsided with his return to Russia. Things are going on in the Caucasus just as they used to in the Grand Duke's time, while Tiflis has not the consolation Hongkong and Shanghai Back Shares (Cum Now Tagre) 190 per cent, premium. of having a court as a set-off to her grievances. To make matters worse, the abrogation of the Caucasus transit has struck a heavy blow at her trade, and nothing has yet emanated from the hauguration of the Baku railway to relieve it. Still, in spite of these drawbacks, there is plenty of progress observable at Tiflis. The builder is busy in every part of the city, and not share.

only are old houses being replaced by new enes, Chinese Insurance Company, Limited—$215 per iorming handsome thoroughfares; but suburbs Situated on an unnavigable mountain terrent, the water being any ornsment to the city, Tiflis and is never at any point very far away from the bare and brown; nothing grows on them but a floial irrigation; not a tree or a shrub can be being daily attended to with the watering can. 25 per cent. discount. look, which would be appalling but for the dens in the German quarter. The care which thesa Teuton settlers display in keeping fresh the verdant aspect of their colony contrasts remarkably with the apathy of the Russians, who China Sugar Refining Company, Limited-$142 do little or nothing to extend cultivation in Germans abound, the city is dry and dusty, and summer months. During this period, hot arid winds often blow across the plain upon Tiflis with a dessicating force, which I can only compare to a concentrated easterly wind. One of Hongkong and China Bakery Company, Limited these blasts provailed the whole of yesterday, producing an naceasing longing for drink and a cooling bath-the latter a luxury almost quattainable here, owing to the Kara river being little more than an open sawer. To-day there is no wind at all, and the atmosphere is cool and agreeable. Mentioning yesterday to a Russian officer the generally arid aspect of Tiffis, he said that one's impression of the Georgian capital depended largely on the direction from which the traveller arrived. Coming from the Black Sea coast, where the constant rains drenching the Anatolian and Caucasian ranges encourages the growth of magnificent forests and rank vegetation of a semitropical character, Tiflis atrikes the traveller as having a scorched and withered aspect. But if he arrives from the south or the east, from Erivan or Baka, where the country is almost ontirely desert, and nothing grows except the camel thorn, the impression is altogether different. So far from sooing no vegetation, his eye seeks out and is refreshed by the trees and shrubs scattered here and therethe German colony strikes him as being quite s little paradise. This will account for most travellers arriving at Tiflis from the Caspian or Persia describing the place as "enchanting," Those who touch it in journeying the other way from west to cast mostly, so far as my memory goes, either discover no attractions in Tillis, or else ignore them.

It is ourious that while Tiffis is the capital of Georgia, and the administrative centre of the Russian province of the Caucasus, the Georgians and the Russians constitute the least numerous element in the population. The principal factors composing this are Armenians, Persians, and Germans. The latter are descendents of a number of Wartenburgers who migrated to Russia to escape religious oppression, and founded what is now the finest and the most flour shing quarter of Tiflis. They still speak their own language, wear their own Tenton dress, and display the same hostility towards Russians generally which is a common feature of German colonists in this country. Equally difficult to assimilate or absorb is the Persian element, occupying the lower and dirtier part of Tiflis, constituting, in point of crowdedness and squalor, as great a contrast to the Garman quarter as St. Giles to Belgravia. The Armenians are quite different from the Germans and Persians. They readily adopt Russian ways and Russian dress. With few exceptions, they speak Russian as readily as their mother tongue, and many of them have even discarded the latter for the guttural languages of their conquerors. So far as I can gather, this conformation of the Armenian race to the Russian is in the main entirely spentaneous. As a matter of fact, the Armenians are a race without a nationality and without a head. Un like the Persians, they have no Shah to look towards to encourage them to resist assimila. Direction of Wind tion, and they have not that keen love of the Fatherland which keeps all Germans in Russia from denationalising thomselves. Too week to form a State of their own, oven if they had any political tendency that way, which they have not, their only course is to throw in their lot with that of Russia. Some writers have described them as the Jews of the Caucasus, pwing to their love of trade and alleged dislike for warlike parsuits. But the comparison is not a good one. In the first place the Armenians, generally speaking, possess a fine physique, which the Jews rarely have, acove all in Russia, and this cannot but secure them respect from the Russians. In the second place, the Armenian is far from being as mild as the Hebrew, and is apt to roturn an insult with a telling backhander. That writers are wrong who speak of the Armenians as an oppressed trading class, unfit for independence because unable owing to lack of spirit to assert it, is proved with tolerable conclusiveness by the number of excellent Armenian generals that war has produced in the Caucasus. General Lazareff, who stormed Kars, General Tergoukssoff, who so ably led the Erivan column, and General Loris Melikoff, who after successfully controlling the Russian operations, was summoned to rule Russin itself, were all three of them Armenians. The best officers, and the best officials, Russia possesses in the Caucasus are of Armenian birth. The commerce of the region is almost entirely in Armenian hands. IMPERIAL QUARTO. IN NGLISH AND CHINESE DICTIONARY WITH THE PUNTI AND MANDARIN PRONUNCIATION. An Anglo-Chinese Dictionary, published at the Daily Press Office, Hongkong. For comprehensiveness and practical service this Work stands unrivalled. All the new words which the Chinese have of late years been compelled to coin to express the numerous objects in machinery, photography, telegraphy, and in science generally, which the rapid advance of foreign relations has imposed upon them, are here given in extenso. Each and every word is fully illustrated and explained, forming exercises for students of a most instructive nature. Both THE 3/3 L L L German Ship the Court and Punti pronunciations are given, the accents being carefully marked on the best principle hitherto attained. The typography Fortmann, Master, will load here for the above displays the success of an attempt to make the Port, and will have quick despatch. Chinese and English type correspond in the size or of body, thereby effecting a vast economy of space, achieving a clearness not previously attained, and dispensing with those vast margins and vacant spaces which have heretofore characterized Chinese publications. To illustrate the vast scope of the work, the following facts are submitted for consideration Chalmers' Vocabulary contains about 16,000

Chinese characters, and Medhurst's English and Chinese Dictionary about 100,000, whilst this work contains more than 50,000 English words, and upwards of 600,000 Chinese charac-Orders for Copies may be sent to the Daily ters. Again, despite all the grammars and other elementary works as yet published, the student of this difficult language absolutely requires examples to display the various appli-cations and equivalents of different words which have one general meaning. EXTRACTS. A PEAR AGO. Your letters before me are lying,. Not crisp or unsoiled, it is true; And somehow I cannot hold sighing. When I have but glancod o'er a few. Those tattered heaconings remind me Of days that are far out of sight; Their passionate pleadings still bind me To days that were full of delight.

Another ends, "Faithful and loving," And this, "You shall not be decrived." Once more the soft wind is blowing Far over the wide stretching plain, Once more the bright river is flowing, In memory once more I reign. You call me " reformer" in jesting, And bog me remodel your life. . . Mish wisdom I gained by the testing; I lost you shocoming your wife.
